

At the Fountain of Trevi. Written for the Sunday Journal.

Wilt thou return to Romo's ruins gray And wander through each legend-haunted

And wander inrough each legend-mainted street.

Tread where the Caesars fell and wind thy way
Among the silent walls where sandalled feet Once bore fair Livia to the marble bath, Or where Caliguia in causeless wrath His father's life attempted?

Wilt thou come?
Then drink, drink deep of Trevi's waters.

Look: How they gush and hurry roughly down, And plash around the Triton's plunging

And play with Neptune's car, nor heed his frown. frown,
Then fill the basin with their strongvoiced hymns
Unto the virgin who their fountain blessed,
All, yes, return, and feel this pleasant

rest,
And worship Health and Plenty.
Wilt thou come;
Then drink! Drink deep of Trevi's waters
RUBY ARCHER.

Certainly one of the most innocent bits of diablerie is that fad of the day, fortune-telling by the tea cup. It is a survival from the days of our great-grandmothers. Perhaps, for aught I know, the superstition goes back into the hoary past of the dark ages or Druidism, but I don't recall that any of the witches of Salem or of the Old World used tea in their rites. Just what relation there may be between soothsaying and boiled tea leaves, or how the imbibing of a moiety of that cheerful beverage should open the future to one's eyes I am unable to explain. But there is many a nan's college graduate whose heart has been uplifted with hope or cast down in lespair by the behavior of a bubble or a mote in her cup of Young Hyson, according to a contemporary. And how many a cup when empty is consulted to see if there has not been left in the grounds a symbol Il bappens that some one has reduced the signs to a system and a "slender little morrow evening, in honor of her guest, clairvoyant art has laid down the ruler for us. If you can't tell your own formal and as ushers.

having read the rules, then, no doubt, you'll have to consult a professional. A wivid imagination is essential. In the first place you must drink of the tea, which should be hot, and then turn out the rest, being careful not to turn out the grounds at the same time, and also being careful not to look at them, as this turned the tea all off, turn the cup com-pletely over so that not a drop of water re-mains for this mould.

A number of East side young ladies will give a leap year trolley party next Thurs-day evening. is considered to bring ill luck. Having mains, for this would mean tears. Then having turned the cup slowly around toward you three times, at the same time wishing the wish of your heart, set the cup down a moment, resting it against the edge of the saucer or any convenient plate. It is very necessary that the cup should rest in this manner a moment, as putting it flat down upon the table would be a tempting of ill fortune, according to tea grounds tenets. Another means of courting ill luck is to interfere with any one else's fortune by presenting your cup while the other is being read. Only one person's cup at a time must be read. Another unlucky omen is to look over the fortune teller's shoulder when that person is consulting your cup or to look into your cup at all. A person versed in the laws of cross. mains, for this would mean tears. Then is consulting your cup or to look into your cup at all. A person versed in the laws of teacup witchcraft will never point out anything in the cup with her finger, but will rather use a convenient spoon or pencil, for to point with the finger brings bad luck. Here are the lucky symbols and the emblems of your fate you shall look for, and the meaning of each as laid down by the authorities:

Three small dots in a perpendicular row Three small dots in a perpendicular row always stand for the wish, and the nearer they are to the top of the cup the quicker the wish will be obtained. Three small dots that form a triangle mean unusual good luck in the fulfillment of the wish. A triangle is always a fortunate sign. So also is an anchor, a horseshoe, a cross and a flag. A flag means that something of unusual advantage to the person is about to occur, or some unexpected good news. Where the grounds are well bunched together and it is clear all about them, it promises that everything will go well with the seeker after the future.

If on the contrary the grounds are scattered about confusedly there will be much confusion over some event, or something disastrous will be received.

tered about confusedly there will be much confusion over some event, or something disastrous will happen to the fortune seeker. The grounds surrounded by fine, dust-like particles signifies trouble, and districts of water in the cup stand for tears. The same fine, dust-like grounds bunched together at the bottom or side of the cup is a sum of money. A small ring in the midst of the regular grounds means an invitation. A large, very round ring perfectly closed means an offer of marriage to a single woman, some fortunate undertaking to a married woman, and a business offer to a man. Should the ring inclose a number of small specks it means an offer of marriage from a wealthy man, or a business transaction in which money is concerned.

Some people can see a whole art gallery in their tea grounds. A bird flying upward in the cup signifies a pleasant letter, but flying toward the bottom it is the bearer of unpleasant news. A horse running is hasty and important news. A horse running is hasty and important news. A horse is always a friend; so also is a dog. In fact, nearly every animal signifies good luck. A rooster crowing is great success of some kind. A turtle signifies a long life or exceptionally good health. An eagle is a friend in need. A dangerous enemy is a snake, especially if it appears at the top of the cup. If it is at the bottom of the cup, supposedly under foot, it can do no harm, but warns one to be on his guard. If it is particularly thick in appearance it is a woman. A bridge is an important undertaking or a departure of some kind which will be successful if the foundations at either end seem strong; otherwise it will be disastrous. For the grounds to form themselves into a pyramid is extremely lucky; so also if they form into flowers. A wreath of flowers signifies a valuable present, either money or jewels. A half moon or a star foretells a lucky investment or unexpected money. Perhaps the very luckiest formation of the grounds is in the form of a tree. This foretells all manner of success, and is especially fortunate. If well balanced in chape, and if a person, one's own self pregumably, is protected by it. specially if it appears at the top of the cup. If it is at the bottom of the cup, supposed by under foot, it can do no harm, but warns one to be on his guard. If it is particularly thick in appearance it is a woman, A bridge is an important undertaking or a departure of some kind which will be successful if the foundations at either end seem strong. For the grounds to form themselves into a pyramid is extremely lucky; so also if they form into flowers. A wreath of showers signifies a valuable present, either money or jewels. grounds foretells a journey, and if connected with a large opening of the grounds a journey by water. A boat also foretells travelling by water. A fish is said to bring good luck in business and it is also supposed to be a suitor in marriage. A small speck near the top of the cup means a letter, larger ones standing for a package, or trunk if with a person. Look out for the person with a small bunch of ground at his back. He is coming to you with a lot of gossip or will talk about you. The straight stick-like grounds are supposedly people, light or dark according to their color and short or tall according to their color and short or tall according to their length. A very small stick means a child. To have the stick or person in a horizontal position is sure to mean illness, and should the larger end of the stick, which is supposed to be the head, lie lower than the other end, it signifies death.

AGED WOMAN KILLED BY HOGS. Body of Mrs. Humphreys, of Emporia, Found Last Night.

Emporia, Kas, Aug. 22.—(Special.) Hundreds of people were out to-day hunting for Mrs. Jeannette Humphreys, who has been missing since Monday. About 6 o'clock this evening, her body was found in a cornfield, about five miles northeast of this city, surrounded by hogs, which were devouring it, although it was still warm. From merks on the ground of considerable struggling, it is the supposition that the hogs found her before she was dead, but in 20 feeble a condition that she was unable to protect herself, and that the greedy animals killed her.

TO FIX THE RESPONSIBILITY BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS WILL IN.

VESTIGATE THE SALE OF ROCK. Ex-Comptroller Shannon and Workhouse Superintendent Brant Both Assert That They Are Not Blamable.

The question the board of public works will endeavor to decide when it meets next Tuesday will be: "Who is to blame for the oose methods which have prevailed in the sale of rock broken for street paving by city workhouse prisoners?" The responsibility rests either with ex-Comptroller Shannon or with Superintendent Brant, of the workhouse. As it is, each of these gentlemen blame the other, but does not deny that gross irregularities have existed, by which the city has lost perhaps many thousands of dollars in revenue. Ex-Comptroller Shannon says that Mr. Brant was guilty of a most flagrant malfeasance in failing to keep grant malfeasance in failing to keep account of the loads of rock that were hauled from the quarry at Twenty-fourth and Michigan avenue. Mr. Brant says that he could spare no men to keep such account, as all his guards were otherwise employed. He says he told Mr. Shannon this but that the latter made no reply. He says further that Shannon told him that he Shannon had full authority, by virtue of the city charter, to sell city rock the accuracy of which statement Mr. Brant did not take the trouble to verify.

Both, as well as J. E. Farris, the contractor who purchased the stone, will be at the meeting of the board of public works next Tuesday, when a thorough investigation of the conditions will be made.
